

THE RUPAGE SISTERS' Dual

Created By Marie-Camille LePage

Once upon a time, in a far far away land existed a clumsy young woman known as Macy-Clamsy. She had beautiful long hair unlike any other inhabitants in the kingdom. She lived in a small wooden cottage with her taller and friendlier sister, Frandie. As for the firstborn, she had the most precious smile in all the land. People would always talk about the infamous Rupage sisters and envied their beauty.

Everyday as requested by their parents, they would take care of the family garden. But of course, the two sisters would always fight for the most stupid reasons. Frandie would always talk to the plants.

"Quit talking to them, Frandie! You know our tomatoes hate it when you go on about your stories!" sighed Macy-Clamsy.

"I have no other choice. You step on them all the time. They need some love, you cluts!" answered Frandie.

At that moment, Macy-Clamsy stopped listening to her annoying sister and noticed something strange in the enchanted forest. Her heartbeat increased quickly. The valiant girl decided to investigate the situation.

Slowly, but heroically, she approached the moving bush. Macy-Clamsy stuttered,

"Whoever you are, show yourself!"

Suddenly, a wicked witch came out of her hiding spot.

"You must cut your hair or I'll bewitch you!" she threatened.

Macy-Clamsy immediately refused. That was when the evil witch grabbed Macy-Clamsy. Frandie heard her cry for help and ran to the forest.

"Leave her alone," warned Frandie.

As soon as Frandie saw the witch would not give Macy-Clamsy up, she proposed her with a deal.

CLIMAX

“Okay, crazy lady, we’ll give you our hair and smile only if you accept this basketball dual. My sister and I against you. If we win, you leave us alone forever but if we lose, you get our hair and smile,” shouted Frandie. The witch accepted. Later, the dual began...

The wicked witch casted a magnetic curse on the basketball ball that would stick the ball to her hand no matter what Frandie and Macy-Clamsy did. The difference kept getting worse. It was now 54-0 for the wicked witch. Later, people around the land heard about this epic dual and started gathering around the basketball court. Frandie saw her best pals, the three little pigs and uncontrollably began chitchatting with them. The elderly could not help it. Being friendly was in her nature.

“Hi guys! It’s been so long. How are you?” blurted Frandie. The situation outraged Macy-Clamsy terribly. There were 15 minutes left to the game. She became possessed by some sort of inner strength.

FALLING ACTION

Macy-Clamsy managed to slap the basketball ball off of the wicked witch..

“I DON’T WANT TO GIVE MY HAIRRRRRRRR!!!” she roared. Her power was remarkably strong that Macy-Clamsy disenchanted the curse on the ball. Meanwhile, Frandie continue blabbering about her uninteresting stories,

“Like, what kind of grocery store doesn’t have sugar?!” The wicked witch lost all skills and Macy-Clamsy began outrunning her and making many hoops. It was now 60-62. Macy-Clamsy passed the ball to Frandie hoping she would come to her senses. The ball hit Frandie’s face. She looked at the scorebaord and realised she had the win in her hand. She skipped the wicked witch and threw the ball... there were 10 seconds left to the game..

RESOLUTION

Frandie scored the winning goal ! Macy-Clamsy ran to her sister and hugged her.

“Thank God! I didn’t want to be bald” she sighed. The wicked witch was displeased by the situation and left the courtyard.

“One day, I will have you Rupage’s sisters, ONE DAY!!” she groaned. The Rupage sisters laughed at the situation and went back home to finish their chores in the family garden as if nothing had happened. However, there was one thing they knew all along. They loved each other dearly even with their clumsiness and unstoppable chattering. They were a team always. And so, they lived happily ever after.
